
In need of sleep

Posted by Bigpaws - 2010/03/09 11:05

Hey guys.....

Any help greatly appreciated on this one..... our gorgeous bear is in season and we have a collie down the road who decides it is good fun to come up and wind Paris up every night at the moment... howling & barking outside the main door to the house.... this has been for the last 3 nights..... starting to loose patience now as you can imagine as poor paris doesn't know what to do with herself nor do we as we aint slept... :bang: , he also decides that coming up to the house in the day when we are out is a good idea.... yesterday i got home and found she had chewed chunks out of the door,.. this is unlike her but it's all down to this collie.. GRRRRRRRRRR, anyone got any ideas to try and stop this collie stressing her out whilst in season?? Our next door neighbour comes round every day a couple of times a day to check on her & let her out when we're out but it doesn't deter him!!!! :evil:

Don't know why some people can't keep an eye on their dogs they just let them roam around and annoy other people!!!

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by robsamandkeo - 2010/03/09 11:07

Go and find its owner and tell them straight to secure their dog or their getting the bill for your door, obviously it was the collie who damaged it trying to get in !!! not paris trying to get out lol.

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Donna - 2010/03/09 11:10

yep - go straight to the owner and remind them of their responsibility as an "owner" or the dog warden will need to be called.

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Dogdaft - 2010/03/09 11:25

Definitely go and see your neighbour, it's really bad of him to let the dog roam like that even though we do get a lot of farmers dogs roaming around here in Devon too :angry:

Sadly, Paris will try to get out to the dog if she is at her peak time of the season usually 10-15 days in.

There are sprays and tablets you can buy over the counter but in my opinion they are pretty useless.

Next step - I would get her spayed 3 months after she finishes her season.

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Bigpaws - 2010/03/09 11:28

Will give it a whirl but he's the most arrogant farmer (not tarring all with the same brush here mind just this particular one!!) i've ever met may need to take back up with us..... maybe if the collie actually meets paris he will be put off for life.... she would certainly square up to him!!!!

:laugh:

The plan was to have her spayed in feb but she came into season again so is def on the list for 3 months time!!!

Cheers Guys

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Donna - 2010/03/09 11:42

yes I tried bitch spray with Keyko too Pat - unsure of its effectiveness and it honks plus she had to be sprayed 30 mins before going out so the whole house would stink even when she was sprayed in the garden. I used to take a stick out with me and had to have a couple of well placed boots up the back end "region" :pinch: to give off leaders/roamers soemthing else to think about.
Not the poor dogs faults either.

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by klemmelk - 2010/03/09 11:57

Try to get her 'wee' stops as far from the house as possible and pray for rain to wash the existing grass/pavement.

When Jasmine's was in season I used to walk her, as quickly as possible, as far from the house for her first few pit stops.

We used to get dogs trying to come over to us no matter how far away we were, used to walk 'out of peak' doggy times as well.

The randy collie will hopefully concentrate away from your house. :)

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Donna - 2010/03/09 12:13

collect her pee and chuck it around the collies own land. :)

chuck it at the farmer then pee yourself as the collie tries to shag him pmsl..... then remind him you will f~~k him a lot harder if his dog turns up on your doorstep once more .

Post edited by: robsamandkeo, at: 2010/03/09 14:14

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by SamYoko - 2010/03/09 14:27

sorry Donna:blush: :blush: :blush:

he's off work this week so at his mischievious worst:bang: :bang: :bang: :bang:

Ok, in fairness, i've just told him off again:bang: & he said sorry, he thought he'd quoted you & replied but obviously caught the 'edit' button by accident & not noticed. He did seem genuinely confused for a few seconds.:laugh: :laugh:

Post edited by: SamYoko, at: 2010/03/09 14:31

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Donna - 2010/03/09 14:40

bless him - is it nap time for Rob....:huh:

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by samjoneslittlelegs - 2010/03/09 14:55

If you are in could you throw a bucket of water at the dog from an upstairs window - or use a hose on it???

Sorry, silly suggestion but it worked with a dog who came after Nori on her first season. :blush: :blush:

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by mariemisty - 2010/03/09 15:03

LMAO @ Rob. So does that mean you have 2 toddles to try and control this week Sam?

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Burnzy - 2010/03/09 18:53

I'll bring Mika down to sort the randy collie out, oh and the farmer!

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by robsamandkeo - 2010/03/09 19:20

christ Paris is more than a match for any dog never mind a collie lol, it would shit tiself if ever she got through the door, how he would ever climb up on her would defy science..... never mind gravity lol

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by wantakeeta! - 2010/03/09 20:13

Kick him until he learns better, the farmer that is, not the dog obviously;))

The poor boys just doing what most of us men do, hoping to get lucky:)

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by ~LonelyAngel~ - 2010/03/14 11:43

Donna wrote:

collect her pee and chuck it around the collies own land. :)

chuck it at the farmer then pee yourself as the collie tries to shag him pmsl..... then remind him you will f~~k him a lot harder if his dog turns up on your doorstep once more .

Post edited by: robsamandkeo, at: 2010/03/09 14:14

Donna :ohmy: I am shocked :laugh:

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by Donna - 2010/03/14 14:19

yes most people would be reading that post.....but hopefully will realise the POST EDITED BY GOBSAMKEO makes sense.....

=====

Re:In need of sleep

Posted by sarah.so - 2010/03/15 00:31

I cant believe i missed that!

Rob you naughty naughty boy!

=====